

Which countries are most affected?

Which countries are most affected by malaria?

Kenya, Democratic Republic of the Congo and Angola were the top three most affected countries by malaria. From the dashboard, I clicked on countries with darker shading. The darkest shading showed that there were 27,896 average deaths every year and 76.43 average deaths every day. Democratic Republic of the Congo came next with 15,203 average deaths every year and 41.65 average deaths every day while 11,469 average deaths and 31.42 average deaths for Congo.

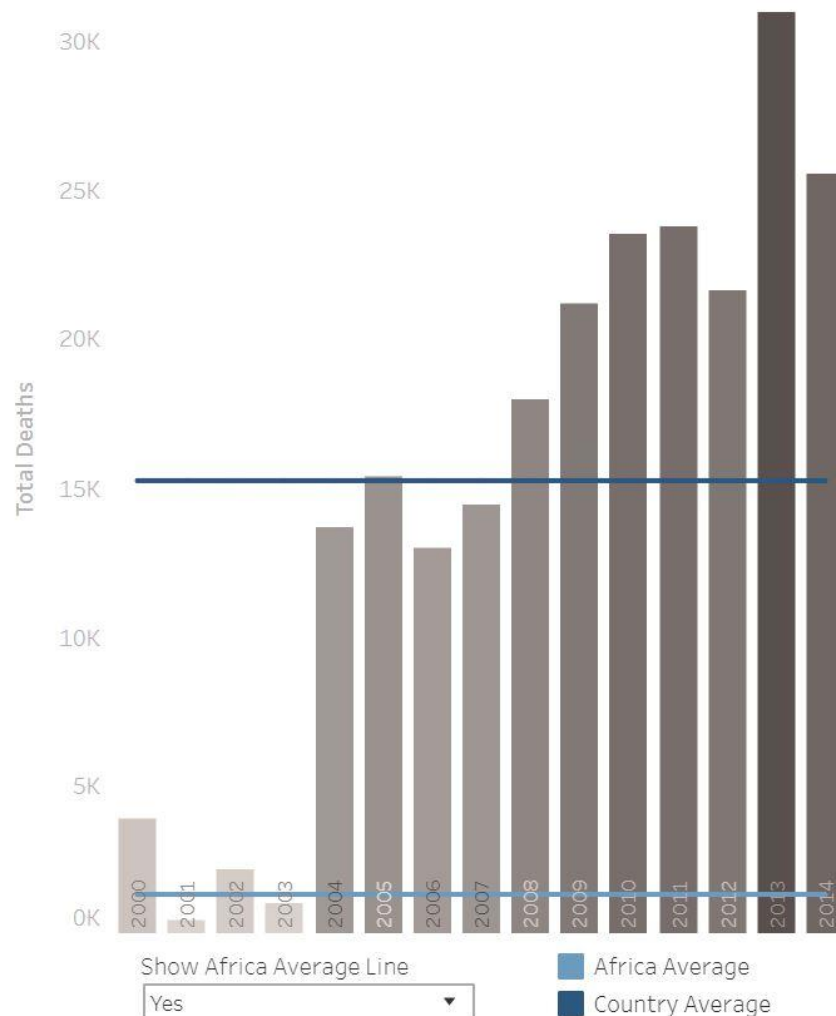

How have the number of malaria deaths changed over time in Kenya?

How have the number of malaria deaths changed over time in Kenya?

Deaths caused by malaria per year in Kenya have had substantially dropped since 2000. From the dashboard, I clicked on Kenya on the map, the bar chart showed the deaths from 2000 to 2014. Before 2003, deaths per year ranged from approximately 47,000 to 52,000. In 2004, deaths dropped to about 25,000. Then, in 2015 and 2016, deaths increased to about 40,000. In 2010, deaths dropped to about 25,000 again. After 2010, deaths per year maintained about 1,000 – 2,000.

How have the number of malaria deaths changed over time in Democratic Republic of the Congo?

How have the number of malaria deaths changed over time in Democratic Republic of the Congo?

Deaths caused by malaria per year in Democratic Republic of the Congo had substantially increased since 2000. From the dashboard, I clicked on Democratic Republic of the Congo, the bar chart showed the deaths from 2000 to 2014. Before 2004, the deaths per year were less than 5,000. However, from 2004 to 2007, deaths per year had been tripled (about 15,000). From 2008 to 2012, deaths per year had been increased (ranged from about 17,000 to 23,000). In 2013, deaths reached the peak (more than 30,000). In 2014, deaths decreased to about 25,000.